Warm vs. cold courtships?

As the comfort of the home is, so will the heart respond. No woman can be at her best where the atmosphere is icy. She knows that the human heart is a thermometer and is influenced by cozy surroundings—for warmth induces comfort and comfort is the basis of all human happiness. The one method of unfailingly producing genial, wholesome warmth that radiates, with gentle glow, through every room alike, is by an outfit of heating does away with dust and grime, coal gases and soot, stops scuttle lugging, blackening, storing, annual repairs, etc.

This heating protects the family health by wholesome, purely warmed air—not burned-out air which has been robbed of its oxygen by coming in contact with red hot surfaces of old fashioned heating methods. Then, too, IDEAL SMOKELESS Boilers and AMERICAN Radiators are prime favorites with women because they take cleaning drudgery off her overburdened shoulders, save the furnishings, save time and temper, and do away with the ills and the bills of old fashioned heating devices.

Buildings thus outfitted sell quicker and you get full money back for the outfit, or 10% to 15% higher rental, or obtain a larger loan from the banker on property thus modernized. Can you think of a better investment?

Whether your house is old or new, farm or city, let us help you to avoid the cheerless home that is so largely responsible for matrimonial discords. Write us today if you have any heating troubles, or if you are planning a new home or other building; our booklets (mailed free) and special information will be worth your while—put you under no obligation to buy. Act now while iron prices are ruling the lowest in 10 years and you can get the services of the most skillful fitters. Call, phone or write today!

The Eight Cylinder Cadillac (TYPE 51)

The matchless mode of motoring reserved to only a few privileged persons in the Old World (at an almost prohibitive price) developed by the Cadillac Company for American motorists!

"The sweetest running car in the World!" This is the verdict of those who have experienced the super-luxury of the Cadillac Eight.

The old Cadillac saying, "Just get in and ride," applies with greater significance now than ever before.

In the High-speed High-efficiency Eight-cylinder V type engine, there are eight power impulses during each complete cycle—one power impulse every quarter turn of the fly-wheel.

There is no interruption between impulses but rather an overlapping so complete that one melts, or merges into another. The torque therefore is constant and the flow of power is continuous.

As the Cadillac softly speeds along under this new power-principle, the sensation is as unique as though you had never motored before.

It is useless to try to depict in words, which you have never felt or to portray a degree of ease which you have never experienced.

Nothing but your first memorable ride in the new Cadillac Eight can reveal the wealth of motoring luxury which this car affords.

As you sink into the soft, yielding cushions, you become enraptured in that delightful sensation of floating through space, and all you need to do to enjoy this sensation is to call on either phone, it will be a pleasure to demonstrate this automobile.

ROCKWOOD. Feb. 19.—O. C. Ginter, the well known businessman of Rockwood, has filed a petition in bankruptcy in the United States Court at Pittsburgh, giving his liabilities as $20,081 and assets $6,625. Mr. Ginter's son-in-law, L. L. Zimmerman, was arrested here Tuesday for forgery preferred against him by Fred Timney, a merchant of Trent.

Charles J. Younk has purchased the farm of W. G. Snyder in Turkeyfoot township and will take charge of it immediately. Mr. Snyder will purchase the old home farm where his mother now resides. Mrs. Snyder will move to Rockwood in the near future, where she will purchase a home.

Mrs. William Fellers is at the bedside of her mother at the latter's home in Bedford county, who has been seriously ill for several weeks.

Miss Elizabeth Newman of Elk Lick spent several days as the guest of her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hupke.

Miss Nellie Pittner of Meyersdale is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. P. P. Hauger.

Howard Snyder, who has been visiting relatives and friends in Rockwood and vicinity for the past two months, has returned home at Dayton, Ohio. Mr. Lewis Sanner, who has also been visiting in Rockwood and vicinity for some months, returned west with Mr. Snyder.

The Rockwood High School Literary Society will hold their second entertainment for the benefit of the public Monday evening, February 22, in the auditorium of the school building. The high school orchestra will furnish the music. The program will begin at 8:15 o'clock.

MEYERSDALE. Feb. 20.—Miss Mary Snyder was hostess on Thursday evening when she delightfully entertained her Sunday school class of the Reformed Church. The affair was held in the banquet room of Amity Hall, and the evening was very pleasantly spent in playing various games, after which refreshments were served.

Mrs. W. T. Meisler and little son of Haydenville, Md., are guests at the home of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Shipley.

John C. Weber of Erie, Pa., but a former Meyersdale boy, is here for a few days' visit with his mother, Mrs. Lizzie Weber and other relatives and friends.

J. J. Dougherty of Connellsville was in Rockwood today attending to business matters and calling upon his numerous friends.

Mrs. C. J. Crowe has returned from Frostburg, Md., where she had been for the past week visiting relatives and friends.

Miss Ivy Penrod returned to her home in Connellsville today after a week's visit here with friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lewis of Hyndman were shopping and calling upon friends in our city today.

R. A. Scott of Philadelphia was a business visitor here today.

H. H. Cupp and son, H. H. Jr., of Johnstown were recent guests at the home of Mr. Cupp's brother-in-law, and sister, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Githlin.

Miss Lydia Shaw and Miss Edith Lachler of Salisbury were Meyersdale visitors on Thursday.

VANDERBILT. Feb. 19.—Mrs. J. H. Haylett, Miss Nellie Danley, Miss Ella Roselle, Frank Reed, George S. Moore, Ralph Bell, Bert Newmyer, Tony Donlido, Nelson Moore, Jeanne Lewis, Roy McLaughlin, Battiste Morrotto, William Rittenour, F. E. Oglesby and W. A. Cosgrove were in Connellsville yesterday.

Mrs. Elizabeth Roselle is visiting her daughter Mrs. Carroll of Uniontown.

Mr. and Mrs. Oda Grey, Mrs. L. L. Dayton, Mrs. R. F. McLaughlin and Mrs. Lian McLaughlin of Beverly, W. Va., visited J. L. McLaughlin, who underwent an operation for appendicitis at the South Side Hospital several days ago, Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. W. A. Cosgrove will entertain in the Ladies Aid Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church at a 10-cent lunch Saturday afternoon.

LITTLE MEN AND LITTLE THINGS.

The Conneltsville Democratic Committee Organ is all wrought up over the fact that The Courier made the statement in one of its news columns that Judge A. C. Dayton of West Virginia had been appointed to the bench by President Wilson, when as a matter of fact and of common knowledge he was appointed by a previous President of the Republic.

The manner in which the circumstances have been seized upon, misinterpreted, distorted and misrepresented for the purpose of making an innocent mistake appear to be a deadly crime, marks the little men which run the thing, the heart of petty passions and small revenge, the mean and grovelling disposition.

The Courier has shown that The Standard does not always tell the truth, and The News has shown the fact that the Standard is not always correct.

SCOTSDALE

Special to The Courier.
SCOTSDALE, Feb. 20.—It was a very fortunate circumstance for the members of the A. M. E. Zion Church that a number of the Fourth ward firemen were out cleaning Broadway shortly after dinner on Friday. When the church caught fire the firemen were right there with the hose and a connection was made to lengthen the hose and the fire fighting began at once. The firemen from the borough of Scottsdale were also brought and the firemen from the borough of Scottsdale were also brought and the firemen from the borough of Scottsdale were also brought.

Y. M. C. A. BOWLING.
On the Y. M. C. A. alleys, John Kistner's team took over Harold Andrews' team by a score of 800 to 75, which is about as close work as has been seen on these alleys lately. The scores:

MOUNT PLEASANT

Special to The Courier.
MOUNT PLEASANT, Feb. 20.—Yesterday was patrons' day for 1275 children in the public schools here. Seven hundred persons visited the schools during the afternoon and evening, this being the largest attendance ever had. Work was displayed in all of the rooms, and regular school work was going on during the day. The Philo and Buckman Library societies having their programs during the afternoon. In the evening at the High School building the school orchestra under the direction of Ralph Kuhn with William Robertson and Moody Deaux as soloists, furnished some excellent music. There was an exhibition in the chemical laboratory in charge of Miss Stewart, a domestic science exhibition, which fruit rolls were made in charge of Miss Wallace. Prof. Durr of the manual training department had some beautiful work on exhibition, as well as a display of the drawing department and shop. The domestic science room also had hand and machine sewing on exhibition. Miss Green, Prof. Gordy and Truett Officer, all were present to make the visitors acquainted. Others were present day and evening and were glad to take visitors to any part of the building.

Constable James Ellis yesterday afternoon took William Shields of Ames to jail at Greensburg for failure to pay his taxes in the case heard before Justice of the Peace L. S. Rhodes where he was charged with not sending his daughter to school. The house as well as Justice Rhodes were very lenient with Shields, but he would not take the opportunity to even pay the fine.

At the Public Court.
The S. R. O. Dramatic Club played to a good house last evening the first play attempted by this club "Golden Gulch," under the management of Bruce Christman. Miss Ruth Hubbs as Job drew her share of attention with plenty of applause. Miss Virginia Harper, the five year old child led the chorus and made a hit with her "Womans Suffrage song." The drama chorus and the "Pippeny chorus" were very pretty and were appreciated by the audience. Miss Minnie Mae Crosby sang "Milkmaid" and with her symphony chorus were very pretty and the music good. Dan Kelley was a typical fishman and his song was enjoyed from times. The cast was well chosen and the work throughout the play was exceptionally good for amateurs.

The Mount Pleasant Independents defeated the Scottsdale basketball team by a score of 30 to 25 at the State Armory last evening, the attendance was record-breaking.

THE SOISSON.

"THE LURE" TODAY.

One of the greatest successes in New York city at the Maxine Elliott Theatre was "The Lure" that will be produced at the Sokoson Theatre today. It is an intense drama of New York society and will be enjoyed by everybody. The two act western drama, "The Call of the West," is an exciting play with Elma Rayne and Stanley Walpole in the leading roles. The L-Ko comedy, "The Hitchhiker's Bride," and the Joker comedy, "The To read our advertising columns.

"No, I'm not," he replied. "You did not expect me to forget, did you? He was uncomfortable under her honest, inquiring gaze. A sudden anger against himself took possession of him. He despised himself for the feeling of loneliness and homesickness that suddenly came over him.

"I thought," she began, and then her brow cleared. "I have been looking up the recitals in the morning paper. The same orchestra you heard last night is to appear again today at—"

"We will go there, Lydia," he interrupted, and at once began to hum the gay little air that had so completely charmed him. "Try it again, Lyddy. You'll get it in no time."

After luncheon, like two happy children they rushed off to the concert, and it was not until they were on their way home at five o'clock that his enthusiasm began to wane. She was quick to detect the change. He became moody, preoccupied; his part of the conversation was kept up with an effort that lacked all the spontaneity of his earlier and more engaging flights.

Lydia went far back in her calculations and attributed his mood to the promise she had exacted in regard to his attitude toward his father. It occurred to her that he was smarting under the restraint that his promise involved. She realized now, more than ever before, that there could be no delay, no faltering on her part. She would have to go down on her knees to him.

"I feel rather guilty, Freddy," she said as they approached the house. "Mr. Brood will think it strange that I should plead a headache and yet run off to a concert and enjoy myself when he is so eager to finish the formal—"

Lydia went on as he said so soon. "I ought to see him, don't you think so? Perhaps there is something I can do tonight that will make up for the last time." She was plainly nervous.

"Hard work you to death if he thought it would serve his purpose," said Frederick, gloomily, and back of that sentence lay the thought that made it absolutely imperative for her to act without delay.

"I will go in for a few minutes," she said, at the foot of the steps. "Are you not coming, too?"

He had stopped. "Not just now, Lyddy. I think I'll run up to Tom's flat and smoke a pipe with him. Think, old girl, for the happy day we've had. You don't mind if I leave you here?"

Her heart gave a great throb of relief. It was best to have him out of the way for the time being. "Well—so long," he said, diffidently. "So long, Lyddy."

So long, she repeated, dropping into his manner of speech without thinking. There was a smothering sensation in his breast.

He looked back as he strode off in the direction from which they had come. She was at the top of the steps, her fingers on the electric button. He wondered why her face was so white. He had always thought of it as being full of color, rich, soft and warm.

Inside the door, Lydia experienced a strange sinking of the heart. "Is Mr. Brood at home?" she began, nervously. A voice at the top of the stairway interrupted the question she was putting to the footman.

"Is it you, Lydia? Come up to my room."

but a queer, greenish hue overspread the lovely, smiling face. The lips were red, very red—redder than she had ever seen them. The girl suddenly recalled the face she had once seen of a woman who was addicted to the drug habit.

Mrs. Brood met her at the top of the stairs. She was but half-dressed. Her lovely neck and shoulders were now almost bare. Her hands were extended toward the visitor, the shiny lace gown hung loose and disarranged about her slim figure.

"Come in, dear. Shall we have tea? I have been so lonely. One cannot read the books they print nowadays. Such stupid things, at—"

She threw an arm about the tall girl and Lydia was surprised to find that it was warm and full of a gentle strength. She felt her flesh tingle with the thrill of contact. Yes, it must have been the light from the window, for Yvonne's face was now aglow with the iridescence that was so peculiarly her own.

A door closed softly on the floor above them. Mrs. Brood glanced over her shoulder and upward. Her arm tightened perceptibly about Lydia's waist.

"It was Ranjab," said the girl, and instantly was filled with amazement. She had not seen the Hindu, had not even been thinking of him, and yet she was impelled by some mysterious intelligence to give utterance to a statement in which there was conviction, not conjecture.

"Did you see him?" asked the other, looking at her sharply.

"No," admitted Lydia, still amazed. "I don't know why I said that."

Mrs. Brood closed her boudoir door behind them. For an instant she stood staring at the knot as if expecting to see it turn—

"I know," she said, "I know why you said it. Because it was Ranjab." She shivered slightly. "I am afraid of that man, Lydia. He seems to be watching me all of the time. Day and night his eyes seem to be upon me."

"Why should he be watching you?" asked Lydia, bluntly.

Yvonne did not notice the question. "Even when I am asleep in my bed, in the dead hour of night, he is looking at me. I can feel it, though asleep. Oh, it is not a dream, for my dreams are of something or someone other than of him. And yet he is there, looking at me. It—it is uncanny."

"An obsession," remarked Lydia, quietly. "He never struck me as especially omnipresent."

"Didn't you feel him a moment ago?" demanded Yvonne, irritably.

The other hesitated, reflecting. "I suppose it must have been something like that." They were still facing the door, standing close together. "Why do you feel that he is watching you?"

"I don't know. I just feel it, that's all. Day and night. He can read my thoughts, Lydia, as he would read a book. Isn't that it disgusting?" Her laugh was spiritless, obviously artificial.

"I shouldn't object to his reading my thoughts," said Lydia.

"Ah, but you are Lydia. It's different. I have thoughts sometimes, my dear, that would not—but there! Let us speak of more agreeable things. Sit down here beside me. No tea? A cigarette, then? Not? Do you forgive me for what I said to you last night?" she asked sitting down beside the girl on the chaise longue.

"It was no absurd, Mrs. Brood, that I have scarcely given it a moment's thought. Of course I was hurt at the time. It was so unjust to Mr. Brood. It was—"

"It is like you to say that," cried Yvonne. "You are splendid, Lydia. Will you believe me when I tell you that I love you? That I love you very dearly, very tenderly?"

Lydia looked at her in some doubt and not without misgivings. "I should like to believe it," she said, noncommittally.

"Ah, but you doubt it. I see. Well, I do not blame you. I have given you much pain, much distress. When I am far away you will be glad—you will be happy. Is not that so?"

"But you are coming back," said Lydia, with a frank smile, not meant to be unfriendly.

Yvonne's face clouded. "Oh, yes, I shall come back. Why not? Is this not my home?"

"You may call it your home, Mrs. Brood," said Lydia, "but are you quite sure your thoughts always abide here? I mean in the United States, of course."

Yvonne had looked up at her quickly. "Oh, I see. No, I shall never be an American." Then she abruptly changed the subject. "You have had a nice day with Frederick? You have been happy, both of you?"

"Very—very happy, Mrs. Brood," said the girl, stupidly. "You must always be happy, you two. It is my greatest wish."

Lydia hesitated for a moment. Frederick asked me to be his wife—tomorrow," she said, and her heart beat to thump queerly. She felt that she was approaching a crisis of some sort.

"Tomorrow?" fell from Yvonne's lips. The word was drawn out as if in one long breath. Then, to Lydia's astonishment, an extraordinary change came over the speaker. "Yes, yes, I should—poor, poor boy! You will marry, yes, and go away at once, at—"

Her voice was almost shrill in its intensity, her eyes were wide and eager and—

"Oh, Mrs. Brood, is it for the best?" cried Lydia. "Is it the best thing for Frederick to do? I—I feared you might object. I am sure his father will refuse permission—"

"But you love each other—that is enough. Why ask the consent of any one? Yes, yes, it is for the best. I know. You must not hesitate. The woman was trembling in her eagerness. Lydia's astonishment gave way to perplexity.

"What do you mean? Why are you so serious—so intent on this?"

"Frederick has no money," pursued Yvonne, as if she had not heard Lydia's words. "But that must not deter you. It must not stand in the way. I shall find a way, yes, I shall find a way. I—"

"Do you mean that you would provide for him—for us?" exclaimed Lydia.

"There is a way, there is a way," said the other, fixing her eyes upon Lydia's face, to which the flush of anger was slowly mounting. "His father will not help him—it is what you are counting upon. Mrs. Brood," said the girl coldly.

"I know. He will not help him, no."

Lydia started. "What do you know about—what has Mr. Brood said to you?" Her heart was cold with apprehension. "Why are you going away next week? What has happened?"

Brood's wife was regarding her with narrowing eyes. "Oh, I see now. You think that my husband suspects that Frederick is too deeply interested in his beautiful stepmother, is that not so? Poof! It has nothing to do with it." Her eyes were sudden, full of resentment now. She was collecting herself.

The girl's eyes expressed the disdain that suddenly took the place of apprehension in her thoughts. A sharp retort leaped to her lips, but she suppressed it.

"Mr. Brood does not like Frederick," she said instead, and could have cut out her tongue the instant the words were uttered. Yvonne's eyes were glittering with a light that she had never seen in them before. Afterwards she described it to herself as baleful.

"So! He has spoken ill—evil—of his son to you?" she said, almost in a monotone. "He has hated him for years—has not that? I am not the original cause, at—? It began long ago—long ago?"

"Oh, I beg of you, Mrs. Brood—" began Lydia, shrinking back in dismay.

"You are free to speak your thoughts to me. I shall not be offended. What has he said to you about Frederick—and me?"

Lydia resolved to take the plunge. Now was the time to speak plainly to this woman of the thing that was hurting her almost beyond the limits of endurance. Her voice was rather high-pitched. She had the fear that she would not be able to control it.

"I should be blind not to have observed the cruel position in which you are placing Frederick. Is it surprising that your husband has eyes as well as ears? What must be his thoughts, Mrs. Brood?"

She expected an outburst, a torrent of indignation, an angry storm of words, and was therefore unprepared for the piteous, hunted expression that came swiftly into the lovely eyes, bent so appealingly upon her own, which were cold and accusing. There was a new phase to this extraordinary creature's character. She was a coward, after all, and Lydia despised a coward.

The look of scorn deepened in her eyes, and out from her heart rushed all that was soft and tender in her nature, leaving it barren of all compassion.

"I do not want to hurt Frederick," murmured Yvonne. "I—I am sorry for—"

"You are hurting him dreadfully," said Lydia, suddenly choking up with emotion.

"He is not—not in love with me," declared Yvonne.

"No," said the girl, regaining control of herself, "he is not in love with you. That is the whole trouble. He is in love with me. But—can't you see?"

"You are a wise young woman to know men so well," said the other enigmatically. "I have never believed in St. Anthony—"

"Nor I," said Lydia, and was surprised at herself. "Do you consider me to be a bad woman, Lydia?" Her lips trembled. There was a suspicious quiver to her chin.

No, I do not, pronounced the girl flatly. "If I could only think that of you it would explain everything and I should know just how to treat you. But I do not think it of you."

With a long, deep sigh, Yvonne crept closer and laid her head against Lydia's shoulder. The girl's body stiffened, her brow grew dark with annoyance.

"I am afraid you do not understand, Mrs. Brood. The fact still remains that you have not considered Frederick's peace of mind."

"Nor yours," murmured the other, absently.

"Nor mine," confessed Lydia, after a moment.

"I did not know that you and Frederick were in love with each other until I had been here for some time," Mrs. Brood explained, suddenly frolicful.

"What kind of a woman are you?" burst from Lydia's indignant soul. "Have you no conception of the honor, nobler—"

Yvonne deliberately put her hand over the girl's lips, checking the fierce outburst. She smiled rather placidly as Lydia tried to jerk her head to one side in order to continue her reckless indictment.

"You shall not say it, Lydia. I am not all that you think I am. No, no, a thousand times no. God pity me, I am more accursed than you may think with the finer and nobler instinct. If it were not so, do you think I should be where I am now?—cringing here like a beaten child? No, you cannot understand—you never will understand. I shall say no more. It is ended. I swear on my soul that I did not know you were Frederick's sweetheart. I did not know—"

"But you knew almost immediately after you came here," exclaimed Lydia, harshly. "It is not myself I am thinking of, Mrs. Brood, but of Frederick. Why have you done this abominable thing to him?"

"I—I did not realize what it would mean to him," said the other, desperately. "I—I did not count all this cost. But, dearest Lydia, it will come out all right again, I promise you. I have made a horrible, horrible mistake. I can say no more. Now, let me lie here with my head upon your breast. I want to feel the beating of your pure, honest heart—the heart that I have hurt. I can tell by its throbs whether it will ever soften toward me. Do not say anything now—let us be still."

It would be difficult to describe the feelings of Lydia Desmond as she sat there with the despoiled though to be adored head pillowed upon her breast where it now rested in a sort of comatose repose, as if there was safety in the very strength of the young girl's disapproval. Yvonne had twisted her little body on the chaise longue so that she half faced Lydia. Her free arm, from which the loose sleeve had fallen, leaving it bare to the shoulder, was about the girl's neck.

For a long time Lydia stared straight before her, seeing nothing positively dumb with wonder and acknowledging a sense of dismay over her own disposition to submit to this extraordinary situation. She was asking herself why she did not cast the woman away, why she lacked the power to reject by deed as well as by thought. Life—marvelous, adorable life rested there on her breast! This woman had hurt her—had hurt her wondrously—and yet there came a stealing over her, subtly, the conviction that she could never hurt her in return. She could never bring herself to the point of hurting this wondrous, living, breathing, throbbing creature who pleaded, not only with her lips and eyes, but with the gentle heart beats that rose and fell in her throat.

After a long time, in which there was conflict, she suddenly pressed her warm lips to Yvonne's. Then in an abrupt revulsion of feeling her arms fell away from the warm sweet body and almost roughly she pushed Yvonne away from her.

"I—I didn't mean to do that! she gasped.

The other smiled, but it was a sad, plaintive effort on her part. "I knew that you would," she repeated.

Lydia sprang to her feet, her face suddenly flaming with embarrassment. "I must see Mr. Brood," she stopped in to tell him that—" she began, trying to convey her confusion, but Yvonne interrupted.

"I know that you could not help it, my dear," she said. "Then, after a pause, 'You will let me know what my husband has to say about it?'"

"To—say about it?"

"About your decision to marry Frederick in spite of his objections?"

Lydia felt a little shiver race over her as she looked toward the door.

"You will help me," she said, tremulously, turning to Yvonne. Again she saw the drawn, pained look about the dark eyes and was startled.

"You can do more with him than I," was the response.

CHAPTER XIV.

Sensations.

Lydia stopped for a moment in the hall, after closing the door behind her, to pull herself together for the ordeal that was still to come. She was trembling, a weakness had assailed her. She had lost Yvonne's presence in a dazed, unsettled condition of mind. There was a lapse of some kind that she could neither account for nor describe as to herself. The black velvet coat that formed a part of her trousseau, hung limply in her hand dragging along the floor as she moved with hesitating steps in the direction of James Brood's study. A sickening estimate of her own strength of purpose confronted her. She was suddenly afraid of the man who had always been her friend! Somehow she felt that he would turn upon her and read her, this man who had always been so gentle and considerate—and who had killed things!

Ranjab appeared at the head of the stairs. She waited for his signal to ascend, somehow feeling that Brood had sent him forth to summon her. Her hand sought the stair rail and gripped it tightly. Her lips parted in a silent smile. Now she knew that she was turning coward, that she longed to put off the meeting until tomorrow—tomorrow!

The Hindu came down the stairs, quickly, noiselessly.

"The master says to come tomorrow, tomorrow as usual," he said, as he paused above her on the steps.

"It—must be today," she said, doggedly, even as the thrill of relief shot through her.

"Tomorrow," said the man. His eyes were kindly inquiring. "Shall I say you are to rest." There was a pause. "Tomorrow will not be too late."

Lydia Stopped for a Moment in the Hall.

She started. Had he read the thought that was in her mind?

"Thank you, Ranjab," she said, after a moment of indecision. "I will come tomorrow."

Then she slunk downstairs and out of the house, convinced that she had failed Frederick in his hour of great need, that tomorrow would be too late.

Frederick did not come in for dinner until after his father and Yvonne had gone from the house. He did not inquire for them, but instructed Jones to say to the old gentlemen that he would be pleased to dine with them if they could allow him the time to "change." He also told Jones to open a single bottle of champagne and to place three glasses.

Later on Frederick made his announcement to the old men. In the fever of an excitement that equaled him to forget that Lydia might be entitled to some voice in the matter, he deliberately committed her to the project that had become a fixed thing in his mind the instant he set foot in the house and found it empty—oh, so empty!

Jones practiced hand shook slightly as he poured the wine. The old men drank rather noisily. They, too, were excited. Mr. Riggs smacked his lips and squinted at the chandelier as if trying to decide upon the vintage, but in reality doing his best to keep from coughing up the wine that had gone the wrong way in a moment of profound paralysis.

The best news I've heard since Judas died," said Mr. Duves, manfully. "I'll am up again, Jones. I want to propose the health of Mrs. Brood."

"The future Mrs. Brood," hissed Mr. Riggs, wheezily, glaring at his comrade. "Ass!"

"I'm not married yet, Mr. Dawes," exclaimed Frederick, grinning.

"Make no difference," said Mr. Dawes, stoutly. "Far as I'm concerned, you are. We'll be the first to drink to Lydia Brood! The first to call her by that name, gentlemen. God bless her!"

"God bless her!" echoed Mr. Riggs. God bless her! shouted Frederick and they drained their glasses to Lydia Brood.

"Jones, open another bottle," commanded Mr. Dawes, loftily.

Frederick shook his head and two faces fell right bravely, however, the old men maintained a joyous interest in the occasion. The young man turned moody, thoughtful, the unwanted exhilaration died as suddenly as it had come into existence. A shadow crossed his vision and he followed it with his thoughts. A sense of utter loneliness came over him with a swift-ness that sickened, nauseated him. The food was flat to his taste, he could not eat. Self-commiseration assailed him. He suddenly realized that he had never been so lonely, so unhappy in all his life as he was at this moment.

GO TO SCOTIDALE

X. M. C. A. Juniors to Meet That Team in That Town Tonight.

The Y. M. C. A. Junior basketball team will go away from home this evening meeting Scotidale on their own floor. The mill town boys expect to get back at the locals for the defeat they got here two weeks ago. Every team that the Juniors have defeated by a fairly large score has claimed that Connellsville are "chumps" on their own floor, and then goes away confident that it can be made up for on the return game. That is Scotidale's case and it is a certainty, to listen to a Junior, that they will have to go home to come out ahead. The team will leave on the 6:30 car.

Next Tuesday they will meet the West Side basketball team on the Y. M. C. A. floor.

CONNELLSVILLE'S REPLY

Connellsville Accepts the Evidence and Many Connellsville Readers Will Profit By It.

Which is the more weighty proof—a few words from a Connellsville resident, whom we know and respect, or volumes from strangers in distant towns? There can be only one reply. P. M. Bechtel, 299 E. Fairview avenue, Connellsville, says: "I was troubled by lumbago and rheumatism across the small of my back and my kidneys were irregular in action. Doan's Kidney Pills removed the pain and lumbago in my back and the action of my kidneys was regulated." (Statement given October 12, 1909.)

Over four years later Mr. Bechtel said: "I have never had any kidney weakness since I used Doan's Kidney Pills several years ago."

Before you, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Bechtel had. Foster-McIlhenny Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.—Adv.

LOCALS WIN

Defeat Leisenring High School in a

First Contest.

The Connellsville basketball team clashed with the Leisenring high school five on the Y. M. C. A. floor last evening and easily took the game. The locals ended the first half with a score of 20-5, and doubled the amount all but one in the last period, while Leisenring brought their score up to 25, making a total of 34-25.

The shooting of the locals was good, and many long shots went straight in the basket. The best of these was one made by Struble, who stood at the far end of the floor under the basket and dropped one in. Leisenring did not seem able to get started until the last half. Then Coach Grossman changed his tactics and placed the guards in the forward positions, with better results.

The Connellsville team has but lately been organized and are completely satisfied with the showing made last evening. With practice they expect to develop into one of the fastest five in the coke region. The next game will be with McClellandtown at McClellandtown.
